

PROCRASTINATION DEMON

SEERSGATE SAYS:

Let's talk about this demon that comes and makes a person walk in ways that are not planning details. The demon would give a false hope, stating that their evening will go fine if they wait until the very last minute to take care of the final planning. There are others who will be late and would blame it on traffic or their children or the alarm clock not going off.

Others will know of events months in advance yet would wait until the day before or days within that same week, to then panic and make you feel as if you did not give them enough time to deal with that evening.

Procrastination has a character base, but also, a demon can make a person fall into a snare of waiting till there is true panic. And so, that person would have to be rescued and will take in whatever pity they can get for moving in lack of planning. That pity spirit is close and will enter the moving to enjoy what the victim is getting from all the mishap.

Procrastination is more than a character dealing: It doesn't respect the person or event or detail that is scheduled to take place. It is better—to that person in this cycle—to just take handouts of mercy and never walk into a level of responsibility that carries the weight of being judged for keeping their word and following through with it.

Procrastination can make a person feel safe. It is a well-run dealing that carries a "security blanket" feeling, always being excused for a demon influence that gets called out as a person's character flaw. We have to learn to take a real look at what makes others move in ways to trigger certain actions.

Others could make it seem as if what they deal with is truly always more important than what you have to follow through on. This is why we must always seek the Planner in all of our details. Learn to give a leading to the Great Holy Spirit. Give your will over to Him. Let Him say what can be removed from your schedule and what space to give over to others to take in a leading way.

You can learn time management, but you can never learn all of Satan's snares to get you off of the way God has ordained for you. Timing is very important. God uses natural time to bring forth the purpose that He has ordained for you. If He says to meet a person at 3 p.m. at the local store on a certain street with your job qualifications, yet you fail to complete the document and show up ten minutes late, should mercy be given? You say this is a rare example, yet you would do this detail in other areas of your living.

Where does it cross over to demon influences? It's where you will take a stand against how God gives His will, to come and walk in what you think would be better; and to show a way to disrespect His will, you would choose to make something else your priority and then blame that other way as the reason God's plan was not the first in tasks to follow.

God sees all within each of us, and God will truly not let a human come and bend His way, to be pushed over. Come and give all that has been put first, and let God's plan be first instead. You can learn to build up character, but when it comes to being Spirit-led, it truly will take following God's will and completing each plan that He would give in this earthly living.